Chicago, IL (March 21, 2018)– The Albany Park Community Center (APCC) is pleased to announce it has received a $5,000 grant from the U.S. Bank community grant program. The funds will be used to support diverse programs offered to the Albany Park community and residents throughout Chicago.

Located in the heart of Chicago's multi-ethnic neighborhood for 40 years, APCC provides education and support to individuals, families, children and businesses in the community. From early childhood education, workplace development, adult education, counseling, childcare and more, members can count on the APCC to help them succeed both personally and professionally.

"For nearly a decade, the U.S. Bank has generously supported APCC. We are deeply grateful to receive the U.S. Bank's community grant and for their ongoing support. The funds will allow us to continue to expand programs that help our diverse community," said Monica Woodson, CEO of APCC.

The U.S. Bank's community grant program is designed to embrace diversity within communities. The program focuses on giving funds to economic development issues tied to workforce education, economic prosperity, neighborhood stability, revitalization, arts and culture.
